ROYAL CARIBBEAN INTRODUCES INNOVATIVE CHEFMAKERS AT SEA
ABOARD FREEDOM OF THE SEAS AND *LIBERTY OF THE SEAS

MIAMI, September 14, 2010 – Vacationing foodies can now choose from a range of culinary experiences aboard a Royal Caribbean cruise. Royal Caribbean International is partnering with renowned Chefmakers Cooking Academy, a cooking school dedicated to aspiring home cooks of all ages, to bring unique cooking programs to guests, who can share in fond family vacation memories and learn practical skills that can be applied day-to-day. Available now aboard Liberty of the Seas and beginning in the fall aboard Freedom of the Seas, guests, at an additional cost, can choose from over a dozen Chefmakers at Sea classes that are taught in the actual galleys of the ship.

"Royal Caribbean continues to be at the forefront of onboard food and beverage offerings, tempting guests with a diverse and exciting lineup of enriching and delectable programs," said Frank Weber, vice president of Food and Beverage Operations, Royal Caribbean International. "The Chefmakers at Sea cooking experience engages guests of all ages by teaching and honing their skills."

Chefmakers at Sea's hands-on classes range from $40 to $125 and are ideal for both kitchen newbies and the experienced home cook alike. With several essential programs like Knife Skills, Quick & Easy Fish, and All About Chicken, to highly social and interactive cooking parties like Asian Persuasion, New American Cuisine, and Surf & Turf, there is an appetizing class for every palate. Successfully piloted aboard Mariner of the Seas, the three-hour programs are open to guests 18 and over, who can try their hand at a series of exciting recipes and new skills under the careful guidance of the Chefmakers culinary team.

"At Chefmakers, we teach Royal Caribbean guests the tricks of the trade, in turn providing a feeling of mastery and confidence that will last long after their cruise," said Richard H. Klein, founder and CEO of Chefmakers Cooking Academy, LLC.

Guests will also have the opportunity to purchase the high quality kitchenware and utensils that they learn to use in the classes.
